Holy weekend

President Obama reflected on his Christian beliefs in his weekly address, wishing all Americans “a weekend filled with joy and reflection, focused on the things that matter most.”

In an address focused entirely on the holidays of Passover and Easter, Obama said “for me, and for countless other Christians, Easter weekend is a time to reflect and rejoice.”

“These holidays have their roots in miracles that took place thousands of years ago,” he said. “They connect us to our past and give us strength as we face the future. And they remind us of the common thread of humanity that connects us all.”

Setup: The gossip mags are reporting that Kim Kardashian, whose divorce isn't even final yet, is dating Kanye West.

Would you date Kim Kardashian?

REDEYE@TRIBUNE.COM
@STEPHENMARKLEY

Why wouldn't you date Kim Kardashian, Markley? Because she's famous? Oh, poor you. You get into free events and get free stuff all the time. Cry me a river.

See, there's a collective sense of entitlement we have with our celebrities. We talk about and judge their scripted life choices to make ourselves feel better about the fact that we're kinda on a big hamster wheel in life. Kim Kardashian is the best possible example of this.

And I don't want to hear the argument that she would be boring to talk to. Most guys probably already dated three girls just like her. At the basic, superficial level of this debate, Kim Kardashian and her ilk are way more familiar to a lot of guys than you might think. Let's see: A way-too-hot girlie girl with not much to say about the current political climate but who really likes the new Nicki Minaj record and fad diets? She loves dancing, shopping and super-unrealistic ideals for love and real relationships due to too many viewings of bad romance films? She uses Coco Chanel quotes as status updates?

Of course you would date Kim Kardashian!

Fake boobs, fake butt, fake whatever? Don't. Care. Put it on the record. I, Ernest C. Wilkins III, would go to town on Kim Kardashian. Hallelujah, holler back.

(Side note to my white friends: Can we cool it with the need to snark on Kim's attraction to black men? Try dating a black guy sometime. We're too legit to quit.)

ERNEST WILKINS IS CHICAGO'S WINGMAN.

I can't even fathom what Wilkins' point would be on the other side of this debate, which is why I'm looking forward to reading it the way you look forward to reading an argument about why one should dip his genitals into the mouth of a ferret: genuine curiosity.

Dating Kim Kardashian ranks among the all-time worst ideas. It's up there with, "Let's greenlight this 'John Carter' thing. Sounds fantastic!" If you're interested in dating a collagen-smeared, silicon-injected stump of plasticity, the Japanese have robot dolls that can satisfy that. Kardashian brings nothing to the table in terms of conversation, passion, intrigue or creativity. It would be like dating a mannequin.

Then you have to consider the Humphries Effect. You'd be tagged as the largest d-bag on Earth and forced to parade around in a horrific reality TV show while all of America snickered at your every wince-inducing gaffe. You'd be the butt of late-night talk show jokes, you'd come out with a clothing line nobody would buy, you'd try to brand a cologne that would smell vaguely like a motel room after a visit with a prostitute.

The one redeeming value—that you would inadvertently be rich—wouldn't even be worth it because every dollar you spent would only serve as a reminder that you earned it by humping one of the 21st century's lowest cultural figures, a walking portent of American decline.

Office bullies?

They could be more common than you might think

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

Kids can be cruel, but so can adults.

Bullying—certainly the buzzword of the moment—happens not only to students at school but to adults at work.

In fact, bullying in all its forms has become a flashpoint in the national conversation. There are now human resource managers conducting seminars on the issue across the country. The “It Gets Better” video project to prevent gay bullying has resulted in more than 3.3 million page views since its 2010 launch. Meanwhile, the documentary film “Bully,” due out Friday, garnered national media attention as producers fought to get its R rating changed to PG-13 so it could be shown in schools. The movie, which was slightly edited, now will open in theaters with a PG-13 rating.

A CareerBuilder survey last year showed 29 percent of American workers ages 24 or younger said they were bullied at work. CareerBuilder is partly owned by the Tribune Company, which publishes RedEye. Another survey, which was commissioned by the Workplace Bullying Institute in 2010, put the number even higher among adults, with 35 percent saying they have been bullied on the job.

“We are where we were with sexual harassment 10 to 15 years ago,” said Judy Skorek, associate professor of counselor education and director of clinical training at Concordia University Chicago. “We know it’s wrong. We know we need to address it, and it’s been out there for a long time.”

But bullying at work isn’t illegal. There’s no federal or state law against it.

While there’s no universal definition of workplace bullying, experts say it generally involves repeated abusive treatment by one or more employees against a co-worker. The behavior is intended to harm that person and results in a hostile work environment. The harm can be done economically, psychologically or physically. Methods can include behaviors such as excluding a target from meetings, yelling at the person, sabotaging his or her work or threatening him or her.

“It breaks people and for some people, it destroys their careers,” Skorek said.

For those bullied, the tormenting, teasing and taunting can feel like torture. They can suffer health problems such as high blood pressure and depression, experts said. Bullying also can lead to workplace violence, loss of income and even suicide, they said. It can cross lines of gender, age, seniority or profession.

The problem doesn’t seem to be getting better given the challenging economy, said Suzy Fox, a professor at Loyola University Chicago’s Institute of Human Resources and Employment Relations.

“Companies are less likely to put in resources that are healthy workplace employee benefit-type policies because no one has any money and people are really stressed and fearful for their job,” she said. “This kind of environment is really fertile for bullying behavior.”

BULLY PULPIT

More than 500,000 supporters joined a campaign recently to get the rating of documentary "Bully" lowered from R to PG-13 so it could be shown in schools. Congressional leaders and celebrities have spoken out or tweeted in favor of lowering the rating and in support of the film. The movie will open in theaters with a PG-13 rating. L.V.

Being picked on, humiliated, or made fun of are topics all too familiar for some kids.

All are covered in the documentary film "Bully," opening in Chicago-area theaters Friday and directed by Lee Hirsch, a Sundance and Emmy Award winner. The movie, backed by the Weinstein Company, shows the effects of bullying on a middle school student, a high schooler, a 14-year-old who is in juvenile detention after trying to scare off her bullies with a loaded handgun, and two families of 11-year-old and 17-year-old students who committed suicide after being bullied.

A movement to change the film's R rating to PG-13 was started by Katy Butler, a high school student in Michigan who was bullied. She created an online petition on change.org, urging the Motion Picture Association of America to lower the rating. Three edits were made to the film to change the rating to PG-13.

"This film has the potential to change the world and change the culture of violence in many schools. But your decision to give this movie an R means that the people who need to see this movie the most—teenagers who are either bullying their peers or suffering from violence and torment at the hands of bullies—won't get to see this film," she said in the petition.

Katy Butler
GETTY IMAGES FILE

Without a law banning it, those being bullied have little recourse. Illinois lawmakers have proposed a healthy workplace bill, but it has been stuck in a House committee for a year. The bill would provide legal relief to an employee subjected to an abusive work environment and incentive for employers to prevent and respond to such hostile work behavior. It also would hold the employer and employee as defendants liable for damages.

"In absence of a law, employers don't have to do anything and they prefer not to," said Gary Namie, founder of the Workplace Bullying Institute in Washington state and director of the Healthy Workplace Campaign. "It's a form of harassment invisible in the eyes of the law."

Without legislation, it's up to each company to come up with an anti-bullying policy or unions to include anti-bullying language in their contracts, Fox said. Some companies think bullying, though the term isn't explicitly used, is covered generally in codes of conduct and employee ethics codes under harassment, she said.

"But the problem is when it's not specifically called bullying, the actual protection in many cases don't take place," Fox said.

Kristen Prinz, a business and employment law attorney, said her Chicago firm gets calls from various people about workplace bullying, sometimes including reports that people are feeling pressured to quit their jobs.

"In this market, [the employees who call] just want to protect their jobs," she said.

She suggests employees document the occurrences, just as an employer would record a worker's bad behavior.

Those targeted may have a legal claim if they believe they have been bullied because of race, gender or any other legally protected class. Claims also may be warranted if the bullying is done in retaliation for reporting violations of company policies, she said.

The workplace itself can foster the bullying culture. If the bully is productive and meets goals, the bully may even be rewarded with a promotion or impunity, Namie said. As such, sending the bully to a program like anger management is only a Band-Aid approach because the work environment has to change, he said.

Workplace experts say employers need to issue corporate statements against bullying, define it as unacceptable, and create a policy for reporting it and a system to prevent it.

There is no easy way to deal with an office bully, experts said. Retaliation is not a good idea because it could make the situation worse. Generally, targets of bullying have the options of reporting it, ignoring it or seeking counseling outside the office or leaving the job.

In the meantime, they can make a "strictly business-based fiscal argument" to a superior that the bully is costing the company money, Namie said. Tolerating a bully can cost a company money in the way of turnover, absenteeism, legal action and other factors.

The bottom line on workplace bullying, Namie said, is "it's inexcusable."

CTA plots intricately planned rehab of Loop elevated tracks

Chicago Tribune

Two CTA track inspectors wearing orange vests and hard hats walked along the Loop elevated structure looking for signs of trouble as they dodged passing trains.

The inspectors didn't have far to go as they approached the Quincy station one day last week. It was one "L" of a mess.

There, just below platform level on the 115-year-old structure, sunbeams reached the street through splinters of badly decayed timbers and wooden ties that support and secure the steel railroad tracks.

The track's two inner rails, which would come in contact with train wheels and stabilize the rail car only in the event of a derailment, were badly chipped and rusted, clearly in no condition to serve, as they once did, as the primary running rails.

To help keep the iconic Loop track going for possibly another 100 years, a $39 million track-replacement project is scheduled to start April 20 and continue primarily on 16 selected weekends through November, CTA officials said.

The renewal work, affecting about 11,500 feet of track, includes the stretch along Wells and Van Buren streets; a small portion above

Wabash Avenue; the Hubbard Curve, just north of the Merchandise Mart station; and the junctions at Lake and Wells and Wabash and Van Buren, CTA officials said.

The rehab work will be surgically performed in 50-hour bursts, starting at 10 p.m. Friday nights and ending before the morning rushes on Mondays, officials said. It'll be a tight schedule, with no margin for error because the tracks must be reopened by 4 a.m. each Monday, officials said. Five of the eight CTA rail lines travel on the Loop elevated tracks.

As such, the project is being highly choreographed, almost down to the minute, to maximize productivity. About 350 workers will demolish and rebuild about 1,000 feet each weekend. Everything above the steel supporting structure and below the station platforms—rail, ties and track components—will be replaced.

Americans double their screen time

You probably do it now without even thinking about it, and that makes you part of the 86 percent. That's the percentage of smartphone owners in the U.S. who are split-screening—using the device while watching TV—at least once a month, according to Nielsen.

When it comes to tablet owners, 88 percent of them tap their devices during TV time at least once a month. For 45 percent of tablet users, supplementing the TV screen is a daily activity, and one-quarter do it several times a day. Smartphone users' habits were comparable.

Derrick Rose drives to the basket during the Bulls' loss to New York on Sunday at Madison Square Garden.

Knicked up

D-Rose feels well enough to play, but couldn't save the day this time

RedEye

A dozen Rose-less games ended for the Bulls on Sunday when their MVP returned to the lineup in New York.

But Derrick and the dominoes couldn't pull out a win as they fell—when their free throws wouldn't—to the Knicks in overtime, 100-99.

The loss, while hard to swallow, could have been much worse. To say the Bulls started slowly would be an understatement. The Knicks raced out to a 20-4 lead before Rose even scored a point, then it ballooned to 27-6 before the Bulls began a slow comeback.

"We have to play with more urgency," Rose said.

They have to make their free throws too.

With the Bulls leading 91-88 with 48 seconds left in regulation, Luol Deng and Rose combined to miss four straight free throws that could have put the game away. Instead, Carmelo Anthony scored five straight points, including a long, game-tying 3-pointer with 11 seconds left.

Rose had a chance to win the game, but he threw up an airball as “We have to play with more urgency.”

—Derrick Rose

time expired.

In overtime, the Bulls jumped out to a 99-95 lead with 2:51 to play but never managed to score again.

Rose finished with 29 points to lead the Bulls and played 38 minutes in his return. This after coach Tom Thibodeau said his minutes likely would be limited.

"I talked to [trainer] Fred [Tedeschi] during the game and he said he was fine," Thibodeau said. "He said he felt great afterward."

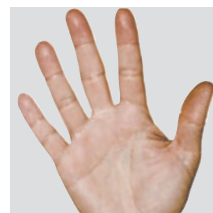

Said Rose: "I told them if we needed to win the game, I wanted to be in there."

The Bulls might need to win a lot more games against the Knicks. If the playoff seeding ends as it stands now, the Bulls and Knicks would face off in the first round.

"They're a good team where they fight throughout the whole game," Rose said of the possible matchup. "If we do play them, it will be a fun series."

ATTEND
Cubs vs. Milwaukee

7:05 p.m. Tuesday, Wrigley Field

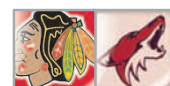

Fans can't use the excuse that going to the Friendly Confines is too expensive anymore. With the way the Cubs have played the past couple of seasons, cheap tickets are plentiful online. For Tuesday's matchup, they are going for as low as $2.50.

Starting Five

The to-do list for sports fans this week.

WATCH
Stanley Cup playoffs:

Blackhawks at Phoenix, Game 1

9 p.m. Thursday, CSN

For the fourth consecutive season, the Blackhawks are in the playoffs, searching for another Stanley Cup. This time they'll have to go through Phoenix, which means some late nights for fans. There'll be a lot of coffee being consumed in Chicago on Friday morning.

WATCH
Bulls vs. Miami

7 p.m. Thursday, TNT

The way this season is shaping up, this game just might be the one that decides the best record in the Eastern Conference. Even if it's not, a Bulls-Heat matchup is one of the most intense and enjoyable around. And by all means, if you can actually afford to be there, go for it.

ATTEND
Wolves vs. Milwaukee

7 p.m. Saturday, Allstate Arena

The Wolves are first in the AHL's Midwest Division and also will head to the playoffs after the regular season ends Sunday. Don't be that guy who boycotts them just because they are affiliated with the Vancouver Canucks or you'll miss some good hockey.

ATTEND
Fire vs. Houston

6 p.m. Sunday, Toyota Park

Offseason pickup Arne Friedrich makes his home debut for the Fire in just the team's fourth MLS game in a month. But it's Fire forward Dominic Oduro who's on fire, scoring the team's only two goals this season and leading the team with eight shots on goal.

1 What was your reaction when Derrick Rose returned to the Bulls lineup?

I'll admit it: I cried a little. Then someone said "groin" and I giggled. I am 6 years old.

I did a dance. It was three parts Bankhead Bounce, one part Harlem Shake.

"He's returning on Easter Sunday? Isn't that a bit on the nose?"

I couldn't stop staring at his groin. Felt like a drunken cougar.

My groin felt very healthy too.

2 What's your first thought about a Blackhawks-Phoenix playoff matchup?

I've heard some alarming things about Valley Fever —will need to investigate every lounge in the area.

Love it. Late games = more time at the bar!

I was hoping for the L.A. Kings so I could trash talk my buddy @geektrooper on Twitter.

The Hawks cannot, will not lose to a hockey team that plays in the desert.

The only thing missing from Hawks home-ice advantage in Phoenix is Jim Cornelson singing the anthem.

3 What is your favorite part of the Stanley Cup playoffs?

Is there any question it's the announcers? When I get married, I'm inviting Pat Foley to officiate.

The whole thing. So much passion, and the Cup win always is a treat.

Drinking beer from the Cup at the very end.

Gotta be the playoff beards. Always have had a thing for lumberjacks.

The part where the bearded men wearing Hawks sweaters hoist the Cup. Is there any other answer?

4 What are your early opinions of the Cubs or White Sox?

You could vomit on the sun and still not have as hot a mess as this Cubs bullpen.

White Sox: Like me at 2:45 a.m., they can't seem to close the deal.

I could make a joke about how Kerry has lost his wood, but I won't.

How do you spell relief? I dunno, and neither do the Cubs.

I hate "the noodle" outside Wrigley. And now I dislike Kerry Wood's noodle arm inside the ballpark.

5 Who in Chicago sports would make a good Easter Bunny?

When it comes to putting all your eggs in one basket, nobody does it better than Bears ownership.

Kenny Williams: He's always hiding the real goods.

Theo Epstein. He's hidden all the fun, colorful players in the minors.

John Lucas III—cute lil' guy with good hops.

Brian Scalabrine. Hops off the bench about once a year to cheers from children everywhere.

Blackhawks have a bone to pick with Phoenix in Stanley Cup playoffs

It's time to have some fun, Chicago.

And by fun I mean the Stanley Cup playoffs. There's nothing like them in sports. The intensity. The drama. The payoff when they're all over. It makes the fur on the back of my neck stand up just thinking about it.

This year the Blackhawks have to go through Phoenix for a chance to lift Lord Stanley's Cup in the name of Chicago. The series begins Thursday in Glendale. That's a city in Arizona. Why they aren't called the Glendale Coyotes, I can't answer.

But what I can do, as RedEye's prognosticating pooch, is give you spot-on predictions for this series.

Here now, my picks.

Blackhawks at Phoenix

9 p.m. Thursday, CSN

First off, I gotta get this off my chest. Jobing.com Arena? That only reinforces my hope the Coyotes get jobbed hard by the Blackhawks. We'll have to wait for that, though. Game 1 is all Coyotes. Radim Vrbata just misses a hat trick as Phoenix rolls, 4-1.

PHOENIX LEADS SERIES 1-0.

Blackhawks at Phoenix

9 p.m. Saturday, CSN

Consider Game 1 a wakeup call, Blackhawks Nation. Patrick Kane, Andrew Shaw and Dave Bolland lead the charge, with Bolly even scoring one of his patented short-handed goals. To add insult to injury, the Coyotes pull starting goalie Mike Smith, but it makes no difference. Blackhawks win 4-2.

Blackhawks vs. Phoenix 8 p.m. April 17, CSN

The Blackhawks and Corey Crawford sure picked a nice time to get their first shutout of the 2011-12 season. Yep, Crawesome does his best brick wall impersonation, stopping everything the Coyotes throw at him as the Blackhawks blow the roof off the United Center in a 5-0 win.

BLACKHAWKS LEAD SERIES 2-1.

Blackhawks vs. Phoenix 7 p.m. April 19, CSN

It's about this time I need to tell you the Coyotes have a man named Raffi Torres on their roster. Yes, the same Raffi Torres who used to play for Vancouver and clobbered Brent Seabrook in last season's playoffs. Why do I mention that? He gets nasty in the third period of this one after the Blackhawks rock the Coyotes in a 3-1 win. Oh, he'll get his ...

BLACKHAWKS LEAD SERIES 3-1.

Blackhawks at Phoenix 9 p.m. April 21, CSN

Torres, meet Brandon Bollig, the Blackhawks' new enforcer. No, scratch, that. Torres, meet Brandon Bollig's fists. Multiple times. Speaking of multiple times, that's a rough estimate of Marian Hossa's goals in this game. Hoss helps the Blackhawks send the Coyotes packing in a 3-2 Blackhawks win. Bring on Vancouver. Or whoever ...

BLACKHAWKS WIN SERIES 4-1.

Hurricane Ozzie strikes Miami

It didn't take long for former White Sox manager Ozzie Guillen to stick his foot in his mouth in Miami. Guillen told Time magazine recently that he loved Cuban dictator Fidel Castro, prompting the Marlins to issue a statement that began, "There is nothing to respect about Fidel Castro." Guillen apologized Saturday, kind of. "I will apologize if I hurt somebody's feelings, or I hurt somebody's thought," Guillen said.

Linsanity won't be back soon

Jeremy Lin poured cold water on the idea he might be back to steal headlines during the first round of the playoffs. "I think unless something goes really well I wouldn't get there," Lin said before Sunday's Knicks-Bulls game. So unless New York gets into the second round, Linsanity is over for quite a while.

THE DIGIT

$1.8 MILLION That's how much Carlos Boozer's new mansion in Biscayne Bay, Fla., cost the Bulls forward, according to TMZ.

MOUThwATCh

“ I played eight and a half years in Chicago. I enjoyed my time there. We won three division titles there. I didn't reach my goal to win a World Series. I don't have anything negative to say about Chicago.”

—Former Cubs third-baseman Aramis Ramirez on his return to Chicago with Milwaukee on Monday.

TRACY'S TREK

RedEye

RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz is on a quest to visit all 30 major league ballparks before she turns 30. She crossed two off her list this past weekend at Ranger Park in Arlington (Texas) and Minute Maid Park in Houston. Here are her dispatches from both parks.

Houston 3, Colorado 2

For me, this will be the Summer of Sam. Houston, that is. The way my schedule works out, I will be seeing a lot of the Astros on the road as I attempt to visit the 10 baseball parks I have left before I turn 30 in August. I will probably be the only Astros supporter on the road since Houston fans have a tough time traveling ... to their own ballpark. The seats were virtually empty Sunday. And I don't blame fans. It was 80 degrees outside with no clouds in sight and the retractable roof was open. No sun and no fun: It was family day at the ballpark. Now I know why they call it the "Juice Box"...

White Sox 4, Texas 3

Yes, it's true, everything is bigger in Texas: the stadiums, the flags, the hot dogs. Especially the hot dogs. If you love long pieces of meat topped with more meat and encased in a thick package, check out the 2-foot-long Boomstick, which weighs 1 pound and costs $26. A better name for it would be the "Boomsick." My travel companion tackled this extraordinary piece of man-made meat, cradling it like a newborn, then stabbing it with a knife and fork. First he ate the dog, which is covered in chili and onions, then moved onto the thick, white bun. He got about halfway through before waving the white flag. Luckily, everyone's your friend when you have a Boomstick, so other Sox fans bailed him out from the Meat Titanic. Everyone's a wiener.

Bob Dylan's 'Blood on the Tracks' getting the Hollywood treatment?

Los Angeles Times

A Brazilian production company has acquired the rights to Bob Dylan's 1975 album "Blood on the Tracks" for an English-language feature film, according to Variety, and considering the imagery of "Shelter From the Storm," "Buckets of Rain," "Idiot Wind" and "Tangled Up in Blue," there could be lot of bad weather up on the screen.

"Our goal is to work with a filmmaker who can create a classic drama with characters and an environment that capture the feelings that the album inspires in all fans," one of the producers told Variety. Maybe they're on to something here—we can think of 10 other classic albums we'd like to see on the big screen.

10 albums seeking scripts

1 Reign in Blood Slayer

Four horsemen, swords, daggers, buxom women—"Game of Thrones" meets "Saw."

2 Bat out of Hell Meatloaf

Operatic, overwrought and catchy, this 1977 tapestry of sexed-up youth with no place to go could be "Hairspray" meets "Superbad" ... or "Glee" with leather pants.

3 London Calling The Clash

"Jimmy Jazz"? "Guns of Brixton"? Somebody get Guy Ritchie ...

4 In the Aeroplane over the Sea Neutral Milk Hotel

The classic psychedelic indie rock concept album would work as a stop-motion animated film—but, then, dozens of grad students probably have already done this.

5 My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy Kanye West

The title alone should guarantee a $20 million opening weekend—and quadruple that if West can snag Taylor Swift to commit to the female lead.

10 Appetite for Destruction Guns N' Roses

Starring Tilda Swinton as an androgynous Axl Rose lookalike named Mr. Brownstone and Sacha Baron Cohen as a Slash-headed transvestite named the Rocket Queen, "Appetite: The Movie" could have the feel of a superhero flick. (Plot: Brownstone battles the Queen for control of a post-apocalyptic Sunset Strip, where a geneticaly evolved race of super-landlords called Adlers have kidnapped Brownstone's love interest, Sweet Child.)

6 3 Feet High and Rising De La Soul

A neon-colored ode to the Daisy Age—think "Yo Gabba Gabba" meets "Shrek"—the tracks on De La Soul's classic hip-hop album are perfect for a G-rated animated feature. The song titles write the script for you: "The Magic Number," "Potholes on My Lawn," "Buddy," "Transmitting Live from Mars" and other multicolored images will drive the kids crazy.

7 The Suburbs Arcade Fire

Set in suburbia, of course, this ode to teen angst and despair in the outer ring could easily be made for $10 million. In fact, by the time you're done reading this, "The Suburbs" treatment will already have made it onto the Black List.

8 The Traveling Wilburys The Traveling Wilburys

An Adam McKay-directed buddy comedy starring Will Ferrell as Jeff Lynne, Cate Blanchett

as Bob Dylan, Russell Brand as George Harrison, Jonah Hill as Roy Orbison and Kristin Wiig as Tom Petty. We're thinking "The Three Stooges" meets "Grumpy Old Men."

9 Darkness on the Edge of Town Bruce Springsteen

Any album by the Boss could be turned into cinema of hope and despair, but the tracks on this 1978 collection already read like titles from a film score: "Streets of Fire," "Badlands," "The Promised Land," "Something in the Night."

Sacha Baron Cohen and Slash

Tilda Swinton and Axl Rose

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aries March 21-April 19
You're usually the one who likes to be in charge in the bedroom, but pushy Mars is turning your significant other into a force to be reckoned with. She might insist on tying you to the bedposts.

Taurus April 20-May 20
As a sober Earth sign, you're great at having reasonable, logical discussions. The moon is inspiring you to sit down and have a chat about something important with your honey. "You know those multiple orgasms I've been having? Truth is, they haven't been so multiple."

Gemini May 21-June 21
Although you're outgoing on the surface, you suffer from secret episodes of shyness. A moon opposition could leave you feeling tongue-tied and worried. You'll wonder what to say to that sexy new friend.

Cancer June 22-July 22
Mercury is filling your head with daydreams. You're remembering some past sexy times with a former flame.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You're in a party till you drop mood, thanks to a sociable sun. Invite 10 people out to a club. Or study up on those cocktail recipes and throw a small party.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Mercury is making you much saner these days. A few weeks ago you were ready to commit mayhem. Now, you're prepared to chill, flirt and have fun with a few people. Good for you.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
With the sun still opposite your sign, don't make any major moves. Don't buy an engagement ring, especially for a girl who is still living with her "ex-boyfriend." She might say that the guy just sleeps on the couch these days, but don't trust her.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
Someone might want to make a shocking confession to you. Maybe your former lover is turning into a part-time vampire. Mercury has you playing armchair therapist.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
The moon in your sign is making you super sexy. Strangers on the street will stop what they're doing to gaze upon your lusciousness. People you had been chasing after for ages will scramble over each other to date you. Things are looking up.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
Pluto is tempting you to get back in touch with someone. But that glamorous cheerleader may have turned into a grotesque and frightening creature.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You keep trying to make troubles with that new honey, but it's not working. Despite your best efforts to sabotage things, you're actually having a great time with someone. Thank friendly Venus for that. Enjoy.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Mercury keeps inspiring you to get into long, drawn-out discussions with people. But don't reveal everything on your first date, OK? He probably doesn't want to hear about your ill-fated teen pregnancy.

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com

» @aboutluisgomez

How did the Cubs' Kerry Wood spend the night before his team's season opener against the Washington Nationals at Wrigley Field?

By decorating cupcakes.

Wood—all 6 feet, 5 inches of him—squeezed the cream cheese frosting out of a pastry bag onto a plate of red velvet cupcakes, just as he had been instructed, at Swirlz Cupcakes in Lincoln Park on Wednesday. His wife, Sarah, sat alongside him by doing the same, only faster.

"Slow and steady wins the race," Wood said, taking a glance at Sarah's plate of professional-looking cupcakes.

If his start to the Cubs season has been less than sweet, at least this was. Swirlz will sell a Wood Family Foundation red velvet cupcake through May 5 and will donate all the proceeds to the Woods' youth-focused charity. And while the cupcakes won't be buried in frosting like the ones Wood decorated himself, they will feature the Wood Family Foundation logo.

"I know which ones the kids are [going to eat]," Wood joked once he and Sarah were done frosting.

Wood said he has plenty of experience decorating cupcakes with his three children at home. But unlike the employees watching at Swirlz, Wood's kids aren't interested in seeing him frost baked goods.

"They want to frost every one of them and [I'm] in the way," Wood said. "They're fighting for the icing."

"You get butterflies because you've been out of work for four and a half months and this is your first time in front of 40,000 fans again." —Kerry Wood, on his nerves the day before the season opener

A better situation?

"Jersey Shore" star Mike "The Situation" Sorrentino has completed his rehabilitation treatment, according to a post on his website. In a statement, the MTV reality star says he has "a whole new outlook on life." Yep, sobriety will do that to a man.

Rap battle

Guess who didn't like this lyric in Kanye West's new single, "Theraflu": "Tell PETA my mink is draggin' on the floor." If you picked PETA, pat yourself on the back. "[West is] a great musician but doesn't seem to have the fashion sense to design anything more than caveman costumes," the organization's senior vice president shot back in a statement to eonline.com. Zing!

THE DIGIT

$33.5 MILLION That's the estimated amount "The Hunger Games" made at the box office to make it the No. 1 movie for the third straight week.

If Jennifer Lopez's boyfriend, Casper Smart, ever gets tired of riding in limos, private jets and whatever else JLo uses to get around, he's got a nice option now. The singer bought her beau a brand-new white pickup for his 25th birthday, eonline.com reports. Does it come with car seats for JLo's twins?

Sexy times

Drake and Nicki Minaj never take a week-end off: The two hip-hopsters each released new videos. Drake's simple vid for "Take Care" featured Rihanna and gorgeous understated photography, while "HYFR" with Lil Wayne is Drake's "re-Bar Mitzvah." Nicki takes a waaaay sexier turn with "Beez in the Trap," featuring many, many thong-clad women.
